Henderson Hall Marine Corps Community Services

January, 2024

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

Nothing like the start of a new year to set personal and family resolutions! It can also be a great time of year to pull out your child's Individualized Education Plan (IEP), Individualized Family Service Plan (IFSP), or Individualized Employment Plan (IPE) and assess goal progress.

January's newsletter explores planning for the next year and beyond in a variety of areas relevant to individuals with disabilities and their families.

EFMP FAQ

SMART GOALS

SPECIFIC

What exact skill will be targeted?

MEASURABLE

Will you know when the goal is met? This may be a number, a specific accomplishment (i.e. graduation ) or even the absence of a behavior.

ATTAINABLE

Is this goal realistic considering current skill level, life circumstances, and time?

RELEVANT

Will meeting this goal make a difference in learning or day-to-day life?

TIMEBOUND

When should this goal be completed?

Whether you're making goals for your family, co-writing a goal with a specialist for an Individualized Family Service Plan (IFSP), or reading goals written by a community provider, consider the SMART goal format for assessing the final product. Making sure a goal tracks exactly what you want can be a goal in itself!

Try it out! Which sample goal below hits all of the SMART targets? Can you find what the samples may be missing?

TRANSITIONS

A transition plan must be included in an IEP by age 16 at the latest per the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA). Many states, including Virginia, Maryland and D.C., begin the formal process at age 14. Transition plans are a particular passion of Claudia Quinby, one of Henderson Hall's Family Case Workers. She recommends starting as young as age 12 with a conversation and the simple question, "What do you think you want to be when you grow up?"

This can gently lead to other questions like "Where do you want to live?" or "Who do you want to live with?" As your child grows older, they will be expected to be active participants in the IEP/transition plan process to the greatest extent possible. This is an important step in developing self-advocacy skills and increasing independence.

By having early conversations about their future, interests and preferences, your child will be more prepared to share their authentic opinions with school professionals.

There are many choices for individuals with disabilities post-secondary school and choices matter; higher levels of self-determination are associated with higher quality of life (Wehmeyer, 2020). Options range from the “typical” four or two-year college experience with needed accommodations (covered by the Americans with Disabilities Act), to vocational-technical schools, life skills programs and day programs. There are a growing number of programs across the U.S. that offer life skills and technical training with a mainstream university experience (i.e., George Mason University’s Mason LIFE Program). Before that 18th birthday consider if your child can make all of their own decisions, if they may benefit from supported decision-making, or if you need to apply for guardianship.

If guardianship is a possibility, the process may be lengthy.

For state-specific transition resources, look to your local school district, your local Parent Training and Information center (PTI) and your EFMP family caseworker. There are many online and in-person trainings you can access. For example, the ARC of NOVA offers a weekly “Lunch and Learn” specific to transitions and the PTI centers all provide trainings and resources for post-secondary transitions.

Don't forget: your male child must register with the Selective Service at age 18 unless homebound.

Transition Resources

Parent Education Advocate Training Center \(PEATC\): PTI for the state of Virginia.

Virginia Department of Aging and Rehabilitative Services: State agency tasked with supporting employment and vocational rehabilitation programs for Virginia

The Parent's Place of Maryland: PTI for the state of Maryland

Maryland State Department of Education Division of Rehabilitation Services: State agency tasked with supporting employment and vocational rehabilitation programs for Maryland

Advocates for Justice and Education, INC: PTI for Washington, D.C.

Department of Disability Services Youth in Transition: Agency tasked with supporting employment and vocational rehabilitation programs for Washington, D.C.

Think College: Includes a directory of postsecondary education programs for students with intellectual disability

Supported Decision-Making: Federal grant-funded initiative to research and market supported decision-making options

Disability Rights and the DMV

Laws and policies vary depending on the state, but here are some tips specific for individuals with disabilities:

- Are you Deaf or Hard of Hearing and live in VA? You may be eligible for a visor alert card to ease communication with police officers in the event of a traffic stop. The card includes communication strategies.
- You may opt-in to disclose certain medical conditions on your VA, MD or DC driver's license (i.e., speech impairment, autism spectrum disorder)
- In DC, disability parking placards/permits/tags allow the owner to park for double the time posted in any DC metered space (excluding red top meters)
- In VA, disability parking placards/permits/tags allow the owner to park for up to 4 hours free of charge in metered or time-restricted spaces (unless locality prohibits this privilege)
- In MD, disability parking placards/permits/tags allow the owner to park for up to twice the maximum time (up to four hours) in metered spaces and exempt the owner from paying parking meter fee if the meter does not meet ADA requirements. These rules do not apply in Baltimore, MD or if there is a local ordinance prohibiting parking during heavy traffic.
